Christmas With Maud Lewis is a heartwarming and inspiring story about the power of art and the human spirit. This captivating book tells the true story of Maud Lewis, a Nova Scotia folk artist who overcame adversity to create beautiful and meaningful works of art.

Maud Lewis was born in 1903 in South Ohio, Nova Scotia. She was born with a form of juvenile rheumatoid arthritis that left her with severe deformities in her hands and feet. Despite her physical challenges, Maud had a passion for art. She began painting as a child, and she quickly developed a unique style that was both whimsical and charming.

In 1938, Maud married Everett Lewis, a fish peddler. The couple lived in a small, one-room house in Marshalltown, Nova Scotia. Maud painted constantly, and her paintings soon became popular with tourists and collectors. Her artwork was featured in magazines and newspapers, and she even had a one-woman show in New York City.

Maud Lewis's paintings are characterized by their bright colors, simple shapes, and heartwarming scenes. She often painted scenes from her own life, such as her home, her family, and the animals on her farm. Her paintings are full of joy and optimism, and they have inspired people all over the world.

Maud Lewis died in 1970 at the age of 67. She left behind a legacy of beautiful artwork that continues to bring joy to people today. Her paintings are on display in museums and galleries around the world, and her story has been told in books, movies, and documentaries.

The Christmas Spirit

Christmas was a special time for Maud Lewis. She loved to decorate her home with festive decorations, and she often painted Christmas-themed scenes. Her paintings capture the magic and wonder of the Christmas season, and they are a reminder of the importance of family, friends, and community.

In Christmas With Maud Lewis, Dianne Hales tells the story of Maud's Christmas celebrations. She describes how Maud would decorate her home with handmade ornaments, bake Christmas cookies, and sing Christmas carols. She also tells the story of how Maud's paintings brought joy to others during the Christmas season.

Christmas With Maud Lewis is a beautiful and inspiring story that will warm your heart and fill you with Christmas spirit. It is a reminder of the power of art to bring people together and to make the world a more beautiful place.
