

One Woman's Journey From Cubicle in Corporate America to the Depths of the Deep South

I was born and raised in the Deep South, but I left as soon as I could. I couldn't wait to get away from the poverty, the racism, and the ignorance. I went to college in the Northeast, and then I got a job in corporate America. I worked my way up the ladder, and I was making a good living. But I was miserable. I didn't like the work, and I didn't like the people I worked with. I felt like I was trapped in a cubicle, and I was going nowhere.
