

Three Sisters: White and Black in Young America

The Three Sisters are a trio of young women from a small town in North Carolina who are making waves in the music world with their unique blend of folk, soul, and country. The sisters, who are all in their early 20s, have been singing together since they were children, and they have developed a sound that is both timeless and contemporary.

The Three Sisters are made up of Sarah (guitar and vocals), Rachel (bass and vocals), and Hannah (drums and vocals). The sisters grew up in a musical household, and they were all exposed to a wide variety of music from a young age. Sarah and Rachel began playing guitar and singing together when they were in high school, and Hannah joined them on drums a few years later. The sisters began playing gigs at local coffee shops and open mics, and they quickly developed a following for their unique sound.
